In the early hours of yesterday morning, the small community of Nailsworth had high concerns about their safety out on the streets and even in the comfort of their own homes.

There have been eye witnesses of a possible 'monster' rising from the secret laboratory of Victor Frankenstein, a local scientist.

Some may think Dr. Frankenstein is an anti-social professor, but it is well known in the town that the successful scientist has won many awards too.

Dr Frankenstein was always intrigued to find out more about his passion - the creation of life. Citizens of Nailsworth are now having thoughts that this may have been connected to the appearance of a ghostly figure that had alarmed them at dawn.

Although this was Frankenstein's dream, it may have led to the despair in town: On Sunday morning, residents were startled at the sight of a phantom creature, draped over the shoulder of a shrouded silhouette.

The villagers have been deeply worried over the last three months, about the late nights and blood-curdling scenes of a mysterious shadow lurking around in the two-storey laboratory, owned by Professor Frankenstein.

Miss Smith reports, "I was taking my dog for a walk and then suddenly, out of nowhere, he started barking loudly. I looked up and there he was; carrying the dead corpses as though it was normal. Let me tell you, that is not normal!"

Those investigating this suspicious encounter, (scientists and police officers) argue as to whether the monster was a creation of Dr. Frankenstein's or an unidentified object that was yet to be discovered.

Police Office Jones comments on the situation, "At this moment in time, it is too early for us to be able to state the details of this event. We advise local residents to stay cautious of what is going on in their neighbourhood and to contact the police staff if you see something peculiar."

Police investigations are set to continue until further notices are unearthed.
